

METUCHEN-EDISON HISTORICAL SOCIETY
RECORD OF BURIALS IN
PISCATAWAYTOWN GRAVE YARD
AS OF OCTOBER 28, 1880

The following listing, made in December, 1995, is a copy of a 40-page compilation of over 500 graves in the Piscatawaytown Grave Yard (on Woodbridge Avenue in Edison). The original list was recorded by Dr. Ezra M. Hunt in October, 1880. This cemetery adjoins St. James Episcopal Church and is often thought to be affiliated with it, but such is not the case. The strongest evidence points to Edison Township as the actual owner of the property. Refer to the newspaper articles at the end of the document for more information.

This copy is being made now for three reasons: first, to create additional documents that can be placed in local libraries and other institutions so the information is more readily available to the public than it has been to date; second, to better preserve the information because the paper on which it is recorded is old and deteriorating; and, finally, to create information that can be sorted in ways that make research easier. Consequently, as a result of sorting the data, there are four sections to this revised document. The information is: (1) In the same sequence as the original; (2) Sorted in alphabetical order; (3) Sorted in Birth-Year order; and, (4) Sorted in Death-Year order.

The title page of the record from which the copied data was taken (a carbon copy of a 40-page document, the original of which is not in our collection) reads as follows:

RECORD OF BURIALS IN
as of
October 28, 1880
Compiled by
Dr. Ezra M. Hunt

On page 1 of the document, after the last record on the page, appears the following notation:

# Several stones in this yard were broken at the time of the tornado of 1835 and inscriptions are now incomplete.

The pound sign (#) is shown next to those records that were so damaged. It is interesting to note that the adjacent St. James Episcopal Church was completely destroyed by this same tornado, and then rebuilt as it appears today. According to the inscription on the gravestone of Thomas W. Harper, who was killed by the falling of the church, the storm occurred on June 19, 1835.

About half way through Dr. Hunt's original listing, after the name of Jacob Woerner (1792-1864), appears the following: "Note. This list completes the record of all marked graves lying east of the church." On the last page of the Hunt list appears this note: "Colored burial plot in the south west corner of Piscatawaytown grave yard." Following this note are 5 inscriptions for John Demund, Yerkus Martin, Margaret Martin, Mary Dunn and Gifford Dunn.

The original list of grave records, as it was prepared in 1880, seems to follow no particular order, except perhaps as Dr. Hunt encountered them when he was doing his compilation. In addition, each record is preceded by an unexplained upper case W or B or G, which may stand for the color of the headstone (e.g., White, Brown/Black, Gray). In the following table of information, only the column headed RECORD faithfully follows Dr. Hunt's data. The first three columns have been included (and are derived from the inscriptions) to be able to sort the records. Please note, however, that the birth year in column 2 might be off by one year in those cases where insufficient information is shown on the record to make a more exact determination. Also, all notes added in this new transcript have been enclosed in square brackets (i.e., []). Two brief notes about those buried here: the earliest birth date is 1609 and 16 others were also born prior to 1700; the oldest graves, as indicated in the text by Dr. Hunt, are those of Mary Jones and the two Hoopar Brothers who died in 1693.

Although St. James Church is not the owner of the cemetery, a history of the church published in 1976 (The Story of St. James Church, Piscatawaytown, New Jersey and the Neighborhood) does contain some anecdotal material about it. For example:

P. 3: “The Cemetery is not part of the Church property; it is administered by a local Association, and is kept up by voluntary contributions that are not very extensive.”

P. 4: “The Cemetery with its ancient tombs dating from 1693 are well known. The grave of “Richard and Charles Hoopar,” who died of poisoning, have been referred to historically over and over again; until at last a record is found in the Library of Congress with a portrait of the ancient tomb....

There is another grave stone not so well known lying not far distant north of the Hoopar grave; but it is impossible to decipher the inscription; only the date 1693 remains. Obviously it is the stone of an adult grave; was there laid to rest here the mother of the boys [?] - fancy lingers; but fanciful speculation is not history.”

Pp. 8-9: In 1776 there was a skirmish between British troops of the 42nd Foot and the Royal Highland Regiment and a detachment of Jersey militia men. “Thirty British troops were killed or subsequently died of their wounds, and were buried simply by having the earthworks of breastworks turned in upon them. The breastworks, or rather distinct evidences of them, were visible here up to 1910, when the cemetery was cleaned up and leveled. The place of the sepulture ranges from one yard to the east of the church six feet from the railing, to the extremity of the Cotheal tomb.”

P. 13: “Dr. Neilson began measures in 1913, for the erection of a Parish house. It was discovered that the church had no title to the land on which it stood. An old royal grant had long since been invalid; no attempt had ever been made to receive a valid grant from the New Jersey Proprietors. Recourse was had to the good offices of the State of New Jersey. A Bill was passed by the State Assembly reconveying the cemetery and Church ground to the Township Commissioners as ‘common property’ who were then enabled to make a grant, which then was validated by special act. The Church owns a frontage of 190 feet by about 250 feet. The Cemetery is vested in a local cemetery association.”

Appendix-P.4: “In 1695 the East Jersey Proprietors granted two tracts of land to George Drake, Benjamin Hull, Thomas Higgins, and Edward Slater for the benefit of the Freeholders of the Township of Piscataqua in common. The first tract to be appropriated for a burying place....Even before this date the present burial ground had been used for that purpose, and several tombstones bear the date 1693. One well known ancient slab bears the following inscription:

Spectators, underneath this tomb
Lies two boys that lay in one womb
The eldes was full 12 years old
They youngest was 5 twice told.
By eating mushrooms for food
Rare in that day time, They poysoned were.
Richard Hooper and Charles Hooper
Deseased, August Anno Dom. 1693.

This is a somewhat edited version of the actual inscription as recorded by Dr. Hunt, which can be seen under the name “Hoopar.”
